Ukraine at Five: A Progress Report

Conference To Analyze Accomplishments Since Ukraine's Independence

Five years after helping bring down the Soviet Union and declaring its independence, Ukraine has achieved much in many areas, but, at the same time, has lagged in others.

TWG's 1996 Leadership Conference on Columbus Day weekend, with "Ukraine at Five: A Progress Report" as its theme, will analyze that balance sheet with the help of numerous American and Ukrainian experts.

The conference, which is being co-sponsored this year with the Embassy of Ukraine, the US-Ukraine Foundation and the Ukrainian Medical Association of North America, will be held October 11-13 at the Key Bridge Marriott Hotel in Arlington, Virginia, just across the Potomac River from Georgetown, in Rosslyn.

The program will feature a keynote address and two other prominent speakers; four panel discussions on Ukraine's progress; an awards banquet and dance; a reception at the Ukrainian Embassy; and a cultural program.

The most recent list of speakers includes Yuri Kostenko, Minister of Environmental Protection of Ukraine;

Strobe Talbott, Deputy Secretary of State (invited); Valeriy Kuchinsky, Minister Counselor, Ukrainian Embassy; Roman Popadiuk, first US ambassador to Ukraine; Sherman Garnett, Senior Associate, Carnegie Endowment for Peace; Ilya Prizel, Professor, Johns Hopkins University; Andrew Bihun, US Commercial Attaché in Kyiv; Steve Nix, Kyiv Office of the International Foundation for Electoral Systems; and Orest Deychakiwsky, Helsinki Commission staff.

In addition, since the conference falls on the presidential election year, the election committees of the Democratic and Republican presidential contenders were invited to send representatives to present their positions on issues of importance to the Ukrainian-American community.

As in previous conferences, this year's begins with a social get-together—a reception Friday evening at

Helena Zyblikewycz

First TWG Intern Assisting Staff at Ukrainian Embassy

Helena Zyblikewycz, a Georgetown University junior, has been selected and is working as the Washington Group's first summer intern at the Ukrainian Embassy in Washington.

Ms. Zyblikewycz, of Marlton, New Jersey, was selected from a list of applicants following a joint review by the Ukrainian Embassy and the TWG Fellowship Fund, which provides the intern with a $1,500 stipend during her two-month internship.

Theodore B. Zalucky

The Washington Group lost a long-time member and generous Fellowship Fund benefactor July 30, when Dr. Theodore B. Zalucky died in Norwalk, Connecticut. He was 86.

Before moving to Norwalk, Professor Zalucky taught at The Catholic University in Washington and was the author of numerous articles in American scientific journals. He was a member of the Shevchenko Scientific Society and former president of the Society's Washington branch.

Professor Zalucky was the single-most generous contributor to the TWG Fellowship Fund, having contributed over $3,000 since 1991.

His generous support was instrumental in enabling the TWG Fellowship Fund to continue its work in awarding grants for projects that contributed to the advancement of Ukrainians by utilizing Washington-area resources.

Professor Zalucky is survived by his wife, Myroslava, and two sons, Ihor and Myron.

Ms. Zyblikewycz's assignment is with the press office of the Embassy. She gathers Ukraine-related information by computer from the Internet, translates news releases and helps put together the Embassy's newsletter and a brochure on Ukraine.

A third-year student at Georgetown's School of Foreign Service majoring in international economics, Ms. Zyblikewycz began her internship in mid-July, following an early-summer Penn State University-sponsored fellowship at the University of Kyiv-Mohyla Academy in Ukraine. And at the conclusion of her Embassy internship, she leaves for England, where she will spend her junior year abroad at the London School of Economics.

Ms. Zyblikewycz underwent a "baptism of fire" of sorts at the Embassy, coming as she did just before the Washington visit of Ukraine's new prime minister Pavlo Lazarenko, which kept her and the rest of the Embassy staff busy almost around the clock.

"It was my first experience traveling with any kind of foreign dignitaries, my first press experience," the 20-year-old intern said.

"The preparation was a lot of work, but it was rewarding," she added. "I've learned so much about Ukraine in the past two weeks—everything that's going on in Ukraine, its economic reforms—and I've read the whole Constitution backwards and forwards."

Ms. Zyblikewycz grew up in Marlton, New Jersey, near Philadelphia, where she has been active in Plast, the Ukrainian scouting organization, and graduated from the Philadelphia's Ridna Shkola (Saturday Ukrainian school).

Her future plans include graduate school in economics and a career with one of the international financial organizations she visited during the Prime Minister Lazarenko's talks in Washington.

Now that the western economic model is being accepted in Ukraine and elsewhere in Eastern Europe, Ms. Zyblikewycz says she sees a need to re-evaluate that model and reform its shortfalls.

Ms. Zyblikewycz read about the new TWG Embassy internship program in the Ukrainian Weekly. Studying at Georgetown University, just a few blocks from the Ukrainian Embassy, she was intrigued with the possibility of working there, but at first she was not sure whether the internship would fit between her fellowship at the Kyiv Mohyla Academy and the year abroad in London.

The fellowship at the Kyiv-Mohyla Academy was Ms. Zyblikewycz's first visit to Ukraine, which, she said, was "fantastic, out of this world." The foreign students were not isolated but lived "with the people" in the suburbs and commuted by public transit. "It wasn't a glamorous experience at all, but it was wonderful," she said.

TWG President George Masiuk said the embassy internship program was established to institutionalize a link between the Ukrainian-American community and the Embassy of Ukraine.

"Besides providing the Ukrainian Embassy with insights into American society and politics, the intern will help by translating, writing press releases, and helping with computer-related work," Mr. Masiuk said.

"In return, the intern will get valuable job experience and develop contacts that hopefully will launch a successful career, perhaps one that involves Ukrainian-American relations," he added.

Even after only two weeks at the Embassy, Ms. Zyblikewycz appreciates the benefit of this new TWG program:

"It's been a great experience—exciting for now, and it will be useful in the future. Hopefully, I'm helping them out to the degree that they would like," she said.

Mr. Masiuk sees the program as a good example for other organizations to follow.

"I think this type of cooperation will serve as a model for other Ukrainian-American organizations and, hopefully, they too will sponsor interns," Mr. Masiuk said.

Since 1990, the TWG Fellowship Fund has awarded more than a dozen fellowships totaling $14,500 to scholars, writers, journalists, and researchers utilizing resources available in the Washington area.

Tax-deductible donations to the Fund can be mailed to the TWG Fellowship Fund, PO Box 11248, Washington, DC, 20008.

"It's been a great experience"

POSITIONS

The following professional opportunities were gleaned from the Internet:

VOA Program Evaluators

The Voice of America is seeking independent, language-qualified experts to help with the periodic review of VOA's 50 language services, including Ukrainian.

Participants will be asked to evaluate the linguistic quality of the broadcast language, comment on the relevance of program content to the respective audience area, and determine whether the broadcasts conform to standards of accuracy, balance, and completeness.

Those selected to participate will be sent five to 10 hours of programming on cassette, once or twice a year. Participants will be compensated.

While experts need not be native speakers, their command of a given language must be such that they can reliably evaluate the linguistic attributes noted above. Recent 'in-country' experience is required. Those interested in applying should possess at least an M.A. degree—or equivalent work experience—in area studies or linguistics directly related to the broadcast language to be evaluated. Applicants with a background in journalism are strongly encouraged to apply.

For more information contact: Frank Cummins, Director, Office of Program Review, International Broadcasting Bureau, Room 2137, Cohen Bldg., 330 Independence Avenue, S.W., Washington, DC 20547. Fax: (202) 205-0628.

Exchange Field Coordinator

American organization in Ukraine is seeking candidates for the position of Field Coordinator for an exchange program for local government officials, businessmen, and legal professionals from 15 cities in Ukraine.

Responsibilities: participation recruitment; preparation of program information presentations, press releases, etc.; coordination with local government, and local and Western organizations in participating cities in the fields of business, local governance, and law; coordinating with and reporting to the Program Director in Kyiv.

Preferences: language skills, regional travel experience, good communication skills. Salary: $23,000.

For information e-mail: matiaszk@irex.freenet.kiev.ua

Soros Documentary Fund

The Soros Documentary Fund will support international documentary films and videos which focus on significant issues in human rights, freedom of expression, social justice, and civil liberties. Two distinct project levels will be considered: works in-progress, and pre-production seed money.

Grant awards for recommended works in progress will range up to $50,000 with an average of $25,000. Awards for seed funds will range from $10,000 to $15,000.

the Embassy of Ukraine, a conference co-sponsor.

Following registration on Saturday morning at 8 a.m., the conference begins in earnest at 9 a.m. with the keynote address, followed by the first panel discussion analyzing Ukraine's geo-strategic position.

Two more panel discussions will follow in the afternoon, after a luncheon, which features another prominent speaker. The second panel will deal with economic reforms, while the third will focus on the democratization process and legal reforms in Ukraine.

Saturday evening events, beginning with a cocktail hour, include a banquet and the presentation of the TWG "Friend of Ukraine" Award to Hobart Earle, music director of the Odessa Philharmonic Orchestra, and a dance, featuring the Tempo orchestra.

On the last day of the conference, Sunday, representatives to the Federation of Ukrainian American Business and Professional Associations will hold an early morning meeting at 8:30 a.m., before the start of the fourth and last panel discussion on health care reforms in Ukraine.

The conference will conclude with the Sunday brunch, a featured speaker and a presentation of past productions by the Yara Arts Group of New York.

TWG and UMANA members can get a special conference registration all-inclusive package priced at $195 if they act before September 20. Non-members also save by registering early.
